

For Immediate Release: March 11, 2009
Contact: Rebecca Conant, Marketing / Media Coordinator – Commercial Markets
413-665-2163; rconant@hardigg.com

Hardigg Storm Case announces Law Enforcement Solution Product Line
With introduction of line, brand hopes to promote law enforcement solutions.

S. Deerfield, MA – Hardigg Storm Case, a brand of Hardigg Cases, has announced a new line of cases specifically designed for the law enforcement market: the 472 Law Enforcement line.

Derived from Hardigg's line of military cases, the 472 Law Enforcement line has a wide variety of cases, used for everything from weapons transport and storage to tactical field deployable desks and medical chests.

"There is an increasing demand for product solutions for law enforcement officers and Hardigg Storm Case will continue to develop and introduce new and innovative products to meet that demand," says Law Enforcement Marketing Manager Cindy Coughlin.

The new line includes numerous multi-weapon containers designed to hold any combination of M4s and M16s; chests with sliding drawers designed for supply storage; the Field Desk that comes with attachable tabletops for quick set-up; large and small footlockers and trunklockers; the lighter-weight injection-molded trunklocker; and a full range of single lid cases.

A line of Personal Weapons Cases with custom interiors is also available; these custom cuts are made with in-house foam cutting controlled by a computer system for precise handling of complex shapes.

Molded from military-tested polyethelene or our patented HPX® resins, 472 Law Enforcement line is designed to protect against dust, water and impact.

Hardigg has over half a century of standard-setting, innovative engineering. As a result, they have over 400 standard sizes of manufactured cases, the largest selection of molded, reusable cases in the shipping industries.

Hardigg Cases is located at 147 North Main Street in South Deerfield, MA. To find out more about Hardigg Storm Case and the new 472 Law Enforcement line, visit www.stormcase.com or call 800-542-7344.